In Loving Memory Of Shirley Shinn Hollar Miss Her But Let Her Go When she have come to the end of the road. And the sun has set her free. She will not rite in a gloom-filled room. Why cry for her soul and to set her free. Miss her for a little while but not to long. And when your head is bowed down always remember the love that you have shared. Miss her but let her go. For the journey that she must take alone. And This Is A Part Of The Master's Plan. For her step on a road to a beautiful home. And when you are feeling lonely and miss her just go see a love one and do a good deed for them. Praise God She Is Home. Miss Her.....But Let Her Go

Kathy and Larry, We were crushed to hear of Shirley's death. She was so vibrant the last time we saw her we just can't imagine that she is gone. Heaven is our destination and goal but we just want to keep loved ones with us longer. We will never forget Shirley and her energy at Dresses for Haiti - her legacy will outlast her as she helped so many little angels there. Wish we could be there to support you now. We send our sympathy to you and your family - remember us to Pat.
