Dear Poole family, please know that death is not final. Soon our lord Jesus will awaken all those sleeping in death. (John 5:28,29) Then Alex will awaken to a peaceful new earth free from sickness, pain, and even death the former distressing things will have passed away. (Revelation 21:4,5) May you all find real comfort in the beautiful promises of our precious God Jehovah found in his word the bible.

My name is Eric Marshall. I grew up in the Lake Norman area and met Alex in the spring of 1999. Alex was playing guitar in a band at the time we met. I joined into the band with Alex, Jeff Wright, and Bryan Miller. We played, and played, and played, sometimes playing 3 or more times a week together. Eventually we all started sounding really good together, even good enough to play the main stage at Tremont Music Hall in front of about 1,000 people. Alex is a really great guitarist and he absolutely loved to play extremely loud! This was fun for me to play music together with Alex because I love loud music, about as much as he does! Music is something that Alex and I shared together, playing riffs and creating songs, and also going to see other bands play as well. He is a good person with a good heart, someone that you want to be around, and someone that I will never forget. I know his spirit will live on through every one of us that was lucky enough to have met him and I personally believe that Alex is alive and well right now up in heaven with Jesus.

I can't stop crying. Alex has been one of, if not the best friend I've ever had. We didn't hang out as much over the last few years, but we did make time to go to a few races and recently a concert. I was just yesterday thinking to myself that the next time I go, I'd pay for his ticket (now that I have a job). He was always so generous knowing I couldn't afford to go and payed my way a few times so we could go together. That's just the kind of person he was. I can't believe my friend of more than 20 years is gone.
