Jason Sardi

JUL 17, 1976 - OCT 6, 2023

The wild world of professional wrestling lost a passionate, lifelong fan, when on October 6, 2023, Jason Michael Sardi lost his battle against the still undefeated Father Time.

He will live on in the hearts of his longtime love, Jennifer Monroe of Charlotte, NC, their kitten children, Pixie and Pony Boy, his beloved parents Elaine M. Sardi (née Etzel), and Michael J. Sardi of Durham, NC, his brother Justin J. Sardi of Miami Beach, FL, and an enormous array of treasured family spread across the country. He adored his many friends who shared in nefarious adventures through the years, and who appreciated his wry sense of humor, kind-hearted nature, and courageous spirit. He will continue to rally for the Pittsburgh Steelers from above.

Jason was a graduate of Clarion University, was widely known for his brilliant sense of humor, incredible work ethic, and his rare insight on the Philosophy of Life. He was a writer, penning his own obituary, as follows:

One rarely, if ever, knows if they left too early, or too late, or in the ideal, at just the right time. There is probably never a right time for those that loved and knew the one they just lost.

He leaves behind many who loved him, some who did not think much of him, and a whole lot of folks who had no clue who that chap was. In his waking hours, he enjoyed the written word, working out, walking more than Moses, and inexpensive light beer at his humble abode, or a local dive bar. He also enjoyed strolls along the beach, Comedy Central roasts and re-watching hair-raising movies to calm down after a busy day.

He absolutely adored animals, wasn't a grand fan of humans, and will let you know if he gets to the bottom of this whole afterlife thing. Mr. Sardi, while rarely attending church, firmly believed in a higher power and was quite sure he wasn't it. As far as proof ... he is dead ... if he was God, he probably would have survived this whole ordeal.

I won't ask you to not be sad. I won't ask you not to grieve. I won't ask you not to write 'my thoughts and prayers are with you and your family' ... but maybe come up with something a bit more original and genuine on that one.

What I will ask you is to take this as a reminder ... every day is not a given. Love more than you loathe, learn more than you yearn, forgive more than you forget.

One rarely, if ever, knows if they left too early or too late or in the ideal, at just the right time. There is probably never a right time for those that loved and knew the one they just lost. As far as me, I had a pretty good life. I would have stuck around longer, but this wasn't a bald spot on my head - it was a halo. It was time for me to go as well.

The family asks that in lieu of flowers, Jason would encourage donations to Safe Haven for Cats in Raleigh, NC and St. Jude's for Children. A Celebration of Life for family will be announced in the near future.

Dear Elaine, Mike, and Justin; As you all know, we lived in our little bubble down on 4th Ave. as kids, and Jason,...was one of my very first friends. From Mike and Jason teaching me how to step into a swing at bat, catching pop flies correctly, whipping acorns at each other in your backyard and getting yelled at for it (lol), to him stealing my Halloween stash saying he needed to "check it for poison and bad dates on the candy" when he really wanted to steal most of my stash. Jason will forever be a special part of my heart, and our family. I will treasure him...always. We offer our sincere condolences and our heartfelt grievances. He will forever be "Sardine" to me....and my lil' candy stealer. This Halloween,...I will put away a little extra away for him. For safety.- Jamie Beichner & Family

Mike, Elaine & Justin My heart ached today as I heard this news. Even though it has been so many years, it felt as though a piece of me left too. I have so many incredible memories of not just Jason but your entire family living "right next door". All the fires, basketball games in the driveway, hide and go seek through the neighborhood, life advice and lots of laughs! I pray these shared memories bring a smile to your heart and give you comfort while you grieve. Sending much love your way, Kari (Campbell) Kinney

Mike, Elaine & Justin, I am so sorry to hear about Jason. Too many memories to put on paper. He always made living next to each other interesting and always kept us on our toes. Then when I entered the insurance industry he was the first to reach out and offer any help or advice. He truly had a heart of gold. Much Love, Derek

I remember him at my bro (Eli Dortort) & his bro Justin playing baseball in elementary school together. Jason & Justin's dad Mike was one of their coaches. My mom made Mike a shirt that said something like 'play ball til the cows come home' & it had a baseball diamond & cows on it.

Elaine, Mike and Justin as well as all of Jason's friends: It was with sadness that I read of Jason's passing. However, as I read his words, I laughed - often. I remember Jason as a young student and young man with quite a sense of humor. I wish him a peaceful rest. By the sounds of it, he will be looking for answers and the humor that will come with them.

One of the first kids I was fortunate enough to babysit. I remember the first time I went to Clarion Beverage and he was loading my "inexpensive" beer. I thought to myself, I'm getting damn old. Fly high Jason
